LEADERS OF THE FUTURE AND THE FUTURE OF LEADERS

COORDINATORS TRAINING COURSE

Dear Leader,

Throughout this last year, we witnessed how our world has changed in unimaginable ways. Life during the pandemic forced us to transform how we learn, how we teach and how we interact with others and ourselves.

Being aware of this and bearing in mind that as leaders of our organizations we have to plan accordingly, National Geographic Learning has designed a course with the aim of preparing coordinators and directors to lead in a post-pandemic school context. We will address topics such as: people management, leadership, selection and recruitment, goals and results analysis, teachers' professional development and the importance of family. These topics will provide you with the tools and the recognition, from your institution and community, as an efficient leader that is ready to face the challenges of our new normal.

National Geographic Learning invites you to an exclusive event specially designed for users of our English programs:

Leaders of the Future and the Future of Leaders: Coordinators Training Course.

OBJECTIVES

- Support leaders in educational institutions to address topics that are key to their performance as guides and role models within their organizations, through the use of tools and practical examples that they can apply in their daily work.
- Offer a space to leaders to question and reflect about different leadership dimensions that will allow them to align to their organization's institutional objectives.
- Address common daily challenges that Latin America leaders have experienced to generate learning from other people's experiences that are applicable to their own educational institutions.

LEADERS OF THE FUTURE AND THE FUTURE OF LEADERS

DIRECTED TO

Professionals involved in the decision-making process of their English programs in educational institutions that are interested in learning practical leadership tools for a post-pandemic context.
